

Brookfield Residential wins Energy Star Award

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency recognizes homebuilder

CENTENNIAL, Colo. (July 11, 2017) – Brookfield Residential of Colorado is the recipient of the latest Energy Star Certified Homes Market Leader Award, recognizing the high number of energy efficient homes that Brookfield constructed in 2016.

Thanks to energy-efficient designs such as low-E windows, high R-factor insulation and appliances that use less energy, Brookfield's 171 new homes equaled a reduction of 289 metric tons of CO2 emissions, according to Energy Star calculations.

"We believe new home buyers in Colorado who care about their utility bills and who care about the environment will find their best match in a Brookfield Residential home," said Brian Stamm, Manager of Operations for Brookfield Residential of Colorado. "Along with the comfort, design and technological advancements, this emphasis on energy efficiency is what we mean when we describe Brookfield as 'Home Evolved.'"

The EPA explains that its award recognizes the promotion of "energy efficient construction and helping homebuyers experience the peace of mind, quality, comfort, and value that come with living in an Energy Star certified home."

The EPA added that Brookfield's 171 energy-efficient homes translates into a savings of 673 barrels of oil over 10 years, and equals the removal of 61 passenger vehicles from the road.
