300-plus homebuyers help in Flood Recovery Effort

Brookfield Residential donates $10 for every visitor

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (Oct. 15, 2015) – A pledge of $10 per model-home visitor resulted in a Brookfield Residential donation of $3,140 to Habitat for Humanity of the St. Vrain Valley to help in Colorado flood recovery.

Brookfield Residential counted visitors to the company's 13 model homes in the Denver area from Sept. 9 to Oct. 9, and 314 unique visitors crossed the various thresholds in Midtown, Solterra, Brighton Crossing and Tallyn's Reach during that period. The money will go toward the cost of gas meters in the Habitat for Humanity homes that will be constructed in Lyons, Colo. The town was devastated by floods two years ago, and recovery has been challenging.

The closest Brookfield Residential community is Brighton Crossing, but Brookfield plans to break ground on new houses in the nearby Barefoot Lakes community in Firestone by the end of the year. Brookfield has extended until the end of this year its offer of an extra $3,000 in home option credits to flood victims who reserve a spot for a new Barefoot Lakes home.

Brookfield Residential, known as the Denver area's "New Kind of New Home," has built a reputation as the leader in energy efficiency among production homebuilders in relation to cost. A Brookfield home typically costs between $300,000 to $450,000, depending upon model and location.
